Want to be mayor? Explain yourself

Each week, we ask the mayoral candidates a question. We give them 50 words to answer it. Got a question? Send it to dan.kelley@metro.us

Welcome to The Short Answer. This week's question: Why do city leaders continue to look to Harrisburg for school funding when that strategy has failed so many times?

"City leaders are right to look to Harrisburg to do its part to fund our schools. But being right isn't enough if it doesn't yield results. We must find creative local solutions to fill the funding gap — without raising taxes on those that can least afford it."

Doug Oliver

"I said at my campaign launch that we can't wait for superman to fly in from Harrisburg. I'll continue to lobby the state to fulfill their responsibility, but, as mayor, I'll put the focus on raising the necessary revenue here at home."

Jim Kenney

"1) The state has a constitutional obligation to fund public education; 2) good schools help all Pennsylvanians by making us more competitive; and 3) no local community anywhere in Pennsylvania can fund public education by itself. We need a partner in Harrisburg, but we have to produce results, too."

Tony Williams

"They don't need to solve the whole funding gap, but we're asking for their help because to a large extent they're responsible for the current mess. At the same time, I'd end the SRC so that we have local control."

Nelson Diaz

Lynne Abraham's people had a response. They said it was 68 words; they never sent it in. Maybe next week.

Pussy Riot brings punk protest to Penn

Famed Russian protest performers Pussy Riot were at the University of Pennsylvania Tuesday to discuss their art — and their new video, "I Can't Breathe," inspired by the death of Eric Garner in New York City.

"In December, we came to New York to record songs against the war in Ukraine, and found ourselves in Eric Garner protests," explained member Masha Alyokhina.

The new video shows Alyokhina and fellow member Nadya Tolokonnikova slowly being buried in dirt. Their faces are exposed, a rare artistic choice considering Pussy Riot's habit of donning masks during performances.

Group members decided that for music about "death, war and police brutality" it wasn't right to "put on a black [hood] and dance," Tolokonnikova said.

Pussy Riot's music is political, Alyokhina said, because they believe music should represent "values."

"Today, music has lost its values," Alyokhina said. "It's not good. Because the future would be like, 'I lived in the decade of nothing.'" SAM NEWHOUSE

Miracle. Little dog survives three days after house collapse

Ay, chihuahua.

Given up for dead, Bruno the chihuahua rose on the third day from the rubble of a Kensington house which collapsed over the weekend.

The collapse left the dog's owner, Eric Carroll, hospitalized.

Emergency workers and Carroll's relatives had twice tried to find the tiny pooch, before the dog emerged from the wreckage Monday afternoon.

"He didn't have a scratch on him," said Jen Leary, founder of Red Paws Emergency Relief Team.

Leary and her team were called to Sterner and Emerald streets early Saturday after workers from the Department of Licenses and Inspection noticed another chihuahua, named Paws, spotted on what had been the roof of the house. Leary said the team also rescued a cat, but could find no sign of Bruno.

JEN LEARY/ REDPAWS

Workers assumed the dog was dead, but relatives returned to the scene on Monday after speaking with Carroll.

Carroll, who was undergoing surgery at Temple University Hospital Monday and Tuesday, told them that he had been holding the dog for a time after the collapse, but let go of him as he tried to climb out, Leary said.

Relatives knew there was only one person the dog would respond to — John Carroll, Eric's father. He had owned the dog with Eric's mother. He arrived Monday afternoon and called for his canine friend until Bruno appeared.

"He sat in front of the house for two hours," said Jose Feliciano, John Carroll's son-in-law. "He always knew the dog was alive."

City Council challenger in racist Facebook post fracas

Manny Morales, who was endorsed by the Democratic City Committee to run against City Councilwoman Maria Quinones-Sanchez, is now getting some new scrutiny.

His alleged Facebook posts, online at MeetMannyMorales.com, include racist and right-wing commentary.

"If anybody takes this as even valid and truthful they're deluded," said Morales' spokesman Michael Blackie, who said the campaign is considering legal action.

MeetMannyMorales.com was created by "Friends of Maria," the campaign group supporting Quinones-Sanchez as she runs for re-election. She is facing off against Morales for the Democratic nomination in the May primary.

The posts on the page include right-wing posts and racist jokes about black people, including a picture of a black person and an animal with the caption: "who is an animal? Awesome picture [sic]."

"Clearly everything this man espouses is divisive, negative and degrading," said Quinones-Sanchez, a two-term councilwoman.

But Blackie said Morales does not hold the views shown on MeetMannyMorales.com.

"Maybe there's a Manny Morales who's a gun-toting Tea Party member. You can grab and paste this and say, 'Here's the real Manny Morales.' It's not our Manny Morales," he said.

Louie Ortiz, a resident of the district, said Morales does operate the account, and that he found it and gave it to a friend working on Quinones-Sanchez's campaign.

"It's just wacky," Ortiz said. "I thought I was insane until other people started saying they saw it too ... it's definitely his."

Morales was not available to comment.

Murder trial

Ex-NFL star was angry at victim two days before killing: witness

Former New England Patriots player Aaron Hernandez appeared upset with a man he is accused of murdering two days before the killing, an associate of the victim said on Tuesday.

Kwami Nicholas testified in Bristol County Superior Court in Fall River, Massachusetts, that Hernandez stared at the man he is accused of killing, semiprofessional football player Odin Lloyd, and another man at a Boston nightclub on the night of June 14, 2013.

"He seemed like he was angry about something," Nicholas said, adding he saw Hernandez "storming out of the club" and "walking aggressively."

Prosecutors contend Hernandez killed Lloyd, who was dating his fiancee's sister, after becoming upset at him for associating with people he disliked at the Rumor nightclub that night.

Hernandez, 25, had a $41 million contract with the Patriots when he was cut from the team hours after being arrested for Lloyd's killing in June 2013. He is on trial on murder and firearms charges and faces a maximum penalty of life in prison if convicted.

The former tight end and two friends, Ernest Wallace and Carlos Ortiz, picked up Lloyd at his Boston home in the early hours of June 17, 2013, and drove him to an industrial park less than a mile from Hernandez's house in North Attleborough, Massachusetts, where his body was found later that day, according to prosecutors.

Max Stenbeck, son of Swedish media mogul Jan Stenbeck, and a New York City businessman in his own right, passed away on Monday. He was 30 years old.

Stenbeck grew up on Long Island and attended the prestigious boarding school Choate Rosemary Hall in southern Connecticut (the same school John F. Kennedy attended).

After studying at New York University, Max Stenbeck focused on co-managing the Kinnevik Group, the parent company of Metro US, among other successful media companies, with his sister Cristina Stenbeck.

Stenbeck's death was confirmed by Kinnevik, who released a statement saying Stenbeck had died from complications of diabetes and that he was "a wonderful brother, beloved fiance and devoted uncle."

Supporters of Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's Likud party react to exit poll figures as they wait for the announcement of the first official results of Israel's parliamentary elections outside the party's headquarters in the city of Tel Aviv. / GETTY IMAGES

Netanyahu claims victory in Israel election after hard right shift

Voters. Turnout was around 72 percent, higher than the last election in 2013.

Tweet

"Against all odds: a great victory for Likud, a great victory for the national camp led by Likud, a great victory for the people of Israel." Netanyahu wrote on his official Twitter account

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu claimed victory in Israel's election on Tuesday after exit polls showed he had erased his center-left rivals' lead with a hard rightward shift that saw him disavow a commitment to negotiate a Palestinian state.

Difficult coalition talks still lie ahead. Isaac Herzog, Netanyahu's chief opponent and head of the center-left Zionist Union, said "everything is still open" and that he had already spoken to party leaders about forming a government.

But after days in which Zionist Union appeared poised to defeat Netanyahu's Likud, the exit polls put the two parties in a dead heat. Netanyahu could have the easier path to forming a cabinet, which would put him on course to become Israel's longest-serving leader.

He pulled off the feat with a pitch for ultranationalist votes in the final days of the hard-fought campaign, using tactics that could deepen a feud with the White House, at least as long as President Barack Obama remains in office.

Netanyahu has focused on the threat from Iran's nuclear program and militant Islam. But many Israelis had said they were tiring of the message, and the center-left had campaigned on social and economic issues, surging in polls as election day neared.

Two television exit polls, for Channel 10 and Channel 1, said Likud and Zionist Union had each secured 27 seats in the 120-member Knesset. Channel 2 gave Netanyahu a narrow edge, with 28 to 27 for his challenger after polling stations closed.

Opinion polls in the run-up to the ballot had shown Zionist Union with a three to four-seat advantage over Likud, suggesting the public had warmed to Herzog, who won over voters with flashes of wit after enduring being lampooned for his short stature and reedy voice. REUTERS

Five things you need to know

1 US Air Force veteran accused of trying to assist Islamic State

A U.S. Air Force veteran has been charged with trying to provide support for the Islamic State militant group, U.S. prosecutors said on Tuesday.

A federal grand jury in New York City indicted Tairod Nathan Webster Pugh for attempting to provide material support to the group and attempted obstruction of justice.

Pugh, 47, of Neptune, N.J., is to be arraigned Wednesday morning in federal court in Brooklyn. Michael Schneider, a court-appointed lawyer for Pugh, said his client would plead not guilty.

Islamic State / REX USA

Prosecutors allege that Pugh attempted to join Islamic State in January by traveling from Egypt to Turkey and trying to cross the border into Syria.

Turkish authorities sent him back to Egypt, which detained him and subsequently deported him to the United States, prosecutors said. Upon his arrival in Egypt, Pugh was carrying several electronic devices, including a mobile phone that had a photograph of a machine gun, authorities said.

In the United States, federal agents searched his laptop computer and other devices and found recent Internet searches for "borders controlled by Islamic State" and a propaganda video by the group.

Although Pugh was arrested in January, the case had been sealed until Tuesday. REUTERS

2 Republican congressman Schock resigns

U.S. Representative Aaron Schock, a Republican from Illinois whose Downton Abbey-styled office launched a series of media reports questioning his use of taxpayer dollars, announced on Tuesday that he is resigning from Congress.

"The constant questions over the last six weeks have proven a great distraction that has made it too difficult for me to serve the people of the 18th District with the high standards that they deserve and which I have set for myself," Schock said in a statement. REUTERS

3 Press for action on Secret Service scandal

The U.S. Secret Service director was grilled by lawmakers on Tuesday who demanded to know why the agency, entrusted with the president's safety, was not taking action on agents accused of drunk driving on the White House grounds.

Joseph Clancy told a House of Representatives committee that he has no power to fire officers at will.

He said he would not take action until the Department of Homeland Security's inspector general completes an investigation of the March 4 incident. REUTERS

4 Premera Blue Cross breached, medical information exposed

Health insurer Premera Blue Cross said on Tuesday it was a victim of a cyberattack that may have exposed medical data and financial information of 11 million customers in the latest case of health care company reporting a serious breach.

It said the attackers may have gained access to claims data, including clinical information, along with banking account numbers, Social Security numbers, birth dates and other personal data in an attack that began in May 2014 and was uncovered on Jan. 29 of this year. REUTERS

5 AG candidate Lynch caught in Senate logjam

The nomination of Loretta Lynch, President Barack Obama's choice to be U.S. attorney general, suffered another potential delay on Tuesday when the Senate failed to end a standoff over abortion and human trafficking legislation.

Democrats who oppose an abortion provision attached to the trafficking bill successfully blocked moves to limit debate, meaning it could drag on and crowd Lynch out of this week's Senate calendar. REUTERS

Dzhokhar told his friend about 'very strict' older brother

Defense. They contend Tamerlan was the driving force and that his brother followed out of subservience.

Tamerlan Tsarnaev / GETTY IMAGES

Accused Boston Marathon bomber Dzhokhar Tsarnaev told a high school friend his older brother was "very strict" and might not like him because he was not Muslim, the friend testified on Tuesday.

Stephen Silva, who federal prosecutors contend loaned Tsarnaev the gun used in the shooting, said he had long been friends with the defendant but had never met his 26-year-old brother, Tamerlan, who died following a gunfight with police four days after the bombing.

"He said his brother was very strict, very opinionated, and that since I wasn't a Muslim, he might give me a little s— for that," Silva said.

Defense lawyers opened the trial at U.S. District Court in Boston with the blunt admission that Dzhokhar Tsarnaev had carried out the crimes he is charged with, focusing their hopes on the jury sentencing him to life in prison rather than the death penalty he could face if found guilty.

Prosecutors called Silva, 21, to the witness stand to discuss the loan of the rusty Ruger P95 handgun they contend was used to shoot dead Massachusetts Institute of Technology police officer Sean Collier on April 18, 2013.

Silva has pleaded guilty to federal gun and drug charges but was offered leniency in exchange for his testimony. He testified he had gotten the gun from a friend, intending to use it to protect his drug business, and also used it in a robbery.

Tsarnaev asked to borrow it, saying he too was interested in committing a robbery, Silva testified. REUTERS

Super Mario mobile. Nintendo ventures into smartphone games

Japanese video game maker Nintendo Co., Ltd. will venture into smartphone games, heeding calls from investors to boost revenue by taking iconic characters like Super Mario to players increasingly shunning its consoles.

Nintendo, which already warned its annual operating profit would halve on weak console sales, said on Tuesday it was teaming up with online gaming firm DeNA Co., Ltd. to develop and operate gaming apps.

The two companies will also launch later this year an online membership service accessible on mobile devices as well as Nintendo's existing Wii U console and the portable 3DS.

Investors have long called on Nintendo to shift its focus to mobile devices after losing customers to both smartphone gaming app makers and console rivals like PlayStation maker Sony Corp. and Xbox maker Microsoft Corp.

"This will allow us to build a bridge between smart devices and gaming consoles. ... It doesn't mean smart devices will eat away at gaming consoles; it will create an entirely new type of demand."

Satoru Iwata, Nintendo President, told reporters

The company had so far resisted these calls, pinning its hopes on hit games such as "Mario Kart 8." But in January, it halved its operating earnings target for the fiscal year through March to 20 billion yen ($169 million), citing weak 3DS sales in the year-end holiday season.

Under the partnership, Nintendo and DeNA would buy 22 billion yen worth of shares in each other. As a result, Nintendo will acquire a 10 percent stake in DeNA while DeNA will acquire a 1.2 percent stake in Nintendo.

Although Iwata didn't disclose any details about Nintendo's first mobile game, he said it would not be a hand-me-down from the company's famed console titles. REUTERS

Immunization campaign in Kabul

An Afghan health worker administers polio vaccine drops to a child on the second day of a vaccination campaign in Kabul. Nearly nine million children throughout Afghanistan will be immunized during a three-day national polio immunization drive launched on March 15. The immunization campaign comes shortly after Afghanistan reported its first case of polio for 2015, in Helmand, in the Southern Region. Afghanistan and Pakistan are the only two countries in the world to have reported cases of the crippling polio virus in the past eight months, and it is increasingly likely that these are the last two countries on Earth with active polio transmission.

Some Bieber roast jokes went too far for TV

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

These celebrity roasts are generally supposed to find the outer edges of good taste and common decency and obliterate them, with caustic insults being the order of the day. But apparently even jokes that are supposed to go too far can sometimes go too far, as some of the material from Justin Bieber's recent roast has been deemed unfit to air on the March 30 broadcast. So where does Comedy Central draw the line? Jokes about Paul Walker's death, apparently. "SNL" newcomer Pete Davidson, for instance, went with, "Justin got arrested for drag racing. Unfortunately, it wasn't with Paul Walker," which didn't go over too well with the audience — or with "Fast and Furious" star Ludacris, who was also on hand.

That joke and a few others won't make the broadcast.

"Sometimes the line is discovered by crossing it. The Paul Walker references will not be in the telecast," a Comedy Central rep tells the Hollywood Reporter. But here are a few of the insults that were deemed just fine:

"You literally are a guy who has it all — except for respect, love, friends, good parents and a Grammy." CHRIS D'ELIA

"If Anne Frank had heard your music, she would've Uber'd to Auschwitz." JEFF ROSS

Quoted

"When you get to the county jail, hear me, you're gonna be the first dude who ever had a girlfriend and a boyfriend named Gomez."

Dolce & Gabbana calls Elton John a fascist

Oh yeah, Elton John? You're going to boycott Dolce & Gabbana because of their outrageous comments about gay parents having "synthetic" children? Well, that apparently makes you a fascist. In a follow-up interview with Italy's Corriere della Sera, Stefano Gabbana is just plain shocked that John would react so strongly. "I mean, you preach understanding, tolerance and then you attack others? Only because someone has a different opinion?" the designer says. "It's an authoritarian way of seeing the world. 'Agree with me or, if you don't, I'll attack you.' I even posted the word 'Fascist!' on his Instagram." And that's not a word he throws around lightly.

Emile Hirsch gives good mug shot

Emile Hirsch makes one dapper perp. The actor headed back to Park City, Utah, to answer for assault charges stemming from a fight he had with a female producer at a Sundance Film Festival party in January, and he certainly decided to look his best for the occasion. Hirsch's mugshot practically looks like a new headshot — and who knows, maybe he'll start using it as one. At least he seems calm, considering he's facing a potential five years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Over at 500 Walnut Street, developer Tom Scannapieco welcomed Councilman Mark Squilla and Mayor Michael Nutter to break ground on a new condo project, which will have a "glass needle" top.

Rumor has it Old City's next big restaurant will be mega, with 190 seats, and helmed by faces familiar to Philly foodies. Word has it the restaurant will be ready by June and be on Market. Could it be Chef Delilah Winder's now-unused spot at Third?

Interview. Legendary magician James Randi is still 'Amazing'

Magician and professional skeptic James Randi has spent his life doing magic or busting those who con for real, including self-proclaimed psychic Uri Geller and evangelical Peter Popoff. His exploits are detailed in "An Honest Liar," which showcases not only his tricks but also his usually hidden personal life. Even at 86, he still gets angry at climate change deniers and anti-vaxxers.

What kinds of reactions have you received from screenings of this?
You'd be amazed, or I'm amazed — even though I'm amazing as well — I'm amazed to find that they take me by the hand, with tears in their eyes, saying, "You've made a great change in my life." You cannot buy that. But I feel a responsibility to folks who weren't exposed to the skeptical point of view and realize that not all is as it seems, as it is in the general media, who will almost universally support any paranormal or psychic claim that comes along, because it makes good copy. Many media outlets are only interested in whether it's sensational copy, and if it is, then they'll publish it.

Do you get the sense that people like Popoff have some degree of self-deception?
They're not self-deceptive at all. Nobody picks up a violin for the first time and plays Mendelssohn's "Violin Concerto." It takes years of practice in self-denial to do that. These people are playing the violin beautifully. The instrument they're playing is human credulity.

Same with Uri Geller?
No, no, he knows exactly what he's doing. He can't bend a spoon consciously between his hands by trickery and misdirection without knowing what he's doing. MATT PRIGGE

Bonus question

What are the big swindles these days?
The thing I'm worried about now is global warming. Global warming is with us. How long it's going to last and how much damage it's going to do, those are other matters altogether. But it seems very evident that global warming is here and it's something that must be dealt with, and everything we can do to decrease the effects that humanity has on producing global warming must be done.

The anti-vaxxers are the ones that really get to me, because they are killing children. Children are going to die from measles and other diseases we thought we had conquered. Vaccination has saved millions of lives. Now you have celebrities out there, like Jim Carrey — now there's an expert for you. He knows all the technical terms. Carrey is a great entertainer; I've been a fan for years. But I don't listen to him on medical matters.

FringeArts. No Face does nuns in drag in this comedy concert

It started with a premise that any fifth grader on a field trip could understand: People from medieval times look funny. Whether bad nutrition or bad portrait artists are to blame, the 14th-century humans immortalized at the Metropolitan Museum of Art have bulbous noses, buggy eyes and pasty skin.

But because Jaime Maseda and Mark McCloughan are theater artists — they were in New York at the time, working with Pig Iron — they didn't just giggle and move on to the next gallery. Instead, the duo behind the Philadelphia-based No Face Performance Group created a series of shows centered around Sisters Sibyl and Sistine, two medieval nuns with a taste for the 21st century's more deviant offerings.

Debuting tonight as part of FringeArts' intimate Studio Series, the first installment, "Abbot Adam: Evensong," finds the sisters hosting a concert of sorts, complete with cabaret hymns and karaoke.

Maseda and McCloughan portray the Sisters in (not terribly convincing) drag. / JEN BROWN

"We're experimenting with the format of playing music at a concert but also the way people interact at a concert, the way people tell stories at a concert, the way people move and interact," says Maseda. "It's a mix of a concert, banter and bad stand-up comedy."

Despite being Dark Ages nuns, Sibyl and Sistine navigate relatable territory in "Evensong," tiptoeing the fine line between devotion and desire.

Are you ready for a

Interview.
Guillermo Diaz is ready to swap now that Lena Dunham is on "Scandal."

In the world of "Scandal," everyone is hiding something, but Guillermo Diaz's Huck seems to be particularly tortured about his past. Last week's episode saw him finally begin to come forward about his activities in the secret government agency B613, and go on the record about what had happened to him. We caught up with Diaz to talk about what all this means, how weird it is to know Huck's real name and what he could tell us about this week's very special guest star.

So how does it feel to finally learn Huck's real name?
It felt good. It felt a little bit strange. I'm pretty attached to the name Huck, so it was a bit odd to find out that his name was Diego. It was very unexpected.

Has everyone started calling you Diego now instead of Huck?
A lot of people on Twitter are saying, "Do you mind if we keep calling you Huck?" and I'm like, "Yeah, fine, either way." I think people are, even on the show, in episodes we've done after that one, still calling me Huck, so I don't know if Diego's going to stick.

Does it feel a little bit like your character arc all along has been building to this big moment for Huck?
When you see Huck

Watch “Scandal” (and Dunham’s big appearance) Thursday at 9 p.m. on ABC. / ABC

New co-stars

LENA DUNHAM
NICOLE WILDER, ABC

What can you say about Lena Dunham being on the show this week?
I can say that she’s awesome. I can say that she plays a character that we haven’t really seen her do before. She’s a very confident woman on the show, very different from her character on “Girls.” What else? She’s quite sassy and straightforward.

Have you guys all seen the “SNL” spoof she did where she was on “Scandal”?
We were so thrilled. I’m a huge fan of “Saturday Night Live,” and you know what they say — once “Saturday Night Live” starts imitating you or whatever show you’re on, then you’ve made it.

Now that she’s been on your show, will we see you pop up on “Girls” next season?
I would love that! I want to be Hannah’s rebound guy now that she broke up with Adam. I want to be the guy that she just screws just to get over him, you know? Why not?

on the street, he always looks like he’s in some sort of emotional pain, like there’s something going on behind the eyes the whole time. I think keeping that secret, and not thinking that B613 screwed him up so badly that a lot of the time he didn’t know if him having a wife and a child was all in his head, if it was real or not real, has been a battle for him for so long.

Make the most of April showers

Shrubs. Forget delicate flowers: Make your backyard green now with woody plants.

Landscaper Jake Kuklick suggests buying native perennials at local nurseries in the city, like Greensgrow. / BRYN ASHBURN

It may feel like we've only just dug ourselves out of the snow and put away our winter boots, but we're already into planting season.

"Woody plants — shrubs and trees — can be planted as early as mid- to late March. Just make sure there aren't any below-freezing nights in the immediate future," advises Jake Kuklick, owner of Mosaic Landscape Restoration, based out of South Philly. An added bonus: If you put something in the ground now, it will be ready in time for April showers — which means less watering on your part.

Kuklick, who specializes in ecological design, shared his tips for planting now.

Ground or planter?

"Shrubs like it best when planted directly in the ground, but smaller cultivars of these species can survive in larger planters as well. Anyone can be a successful planter: Holes dug in soil ought to be roughly twice as wide, and the same depth, as the root ball of the plant. Water thoroughly — soak the upper 12 inches of the soil — at least once every five days during summer months."

Call in the pros

"Pruning may be required after a couple of years once the plant is established. Contact a local landscaper with knowledge of native plants to keep your shrub looking happy and healthy."

What to plant in city backyards

If it's shady:

"For small, partly shaded yards, I like native shrubs such as inkberry and Fragrant sumac. If you have a little more room, winterberry and ninebarks work well. [They] can provide food and a habitat for local birds and insects."

If it's sunny:

"Stay away from too many annuals bought from box stores! They are colorful but die after one season and then become a mess that needs to be removed. Try Black-Eyed Susan and Purple Coneflower, two native perennials."

Compost confidential

Most food waste except meat, dairy and oily foods is acceptable.
ISTOCK

Recycle. Turn your food scraps into fertilizer — even if you live in the city.

Don't throw that apple core away — put it in the compost and give it a chance at eternal life.

Before you say "ewww," read on.

Lee Meineke, founder and owner of Philly Compost, first recycled food scraps as a kid in Oregon. She encourages compost virgins to flex muscles they've already developed with regard to other parts of the waste stream.

"Hopefully, they already sort out their stuff for recycling," says Meineke. "It's the same thing. Instead of throwing things away, because there is no 'away' — it has to go somewhere — you can recycle your food scraps just like you recycle your paper and plastics."

For beginners, the easiest path to composting is to simply save food scraps in the freezer and then drop them off at a collection site — often a farmers market or a local garden. You'll be providing the essential raw materials for the compost heap. The food waste — no meat, fish or dairy, please — will be mixed with dried leaves to create an active pile of decaying matter, which, after it's "cooked," will help plants grow big and beautiful.

Composting really refers to the act of putting something in an active compost pile (at a garden or in a worm bin) where it will decompose. The benefits include improving soil quality of community gardens and reducing the load on landfills and trash incinerators. When it comes to leftover organic material, "there's no good place for it to go," says Meineke, "except for it to be recycled."

If you're returning unused bits of fruits and vegetables to the food chain, "keeping it as local as possible is the best

Quick and dirty

What it is

Compost refers to decayed organic matter used to help fertilize plants, gardens and trees. It's also the name of the process by which things like vegetables and fruit scraps and tea bags break down and become compost. And, yes, you can be part of the process even if you live in an apartment.

way," said Teddy Tedesco, project manager at the NYC Compost Project hosted by Brooklyn Botanic Garden. Saving rinds and peels can actually be fun and gratifying. "If you freeze them, you won't know they're there," says Tedesco. "That's a great way to avoid the ickiness that comes with rotting food scraps."

Compost expert Teddy Tedesco's top tips for getting food scraps to a peaceful — and productive — resting place:

- Squiggle and wiggle. If you're into creepy crawlies, go straight for the worm bin.
- Stash and dash. Keep your food scraps in the freezer, then drop them off at a Greenmarket or community garden.
- Save and give. Store your scraps and then find a pick-up service to come and take them away — or if you're in a neighborhood with collection bins, drop them in there.

Her must-haves

Beauty routine.
The model and actress brings a splash of the Sunshine State to her gig for Bobbi Brown.

Kate Upton: The secret to flawless sun-kissed skin

Get Kate Upton's glow with pink blush. / PROVIDED

Kate Upton — known for her killer curves — is the face of beauty brand Bobbi Brown. The bodacious blonde, who was featured on the 2012 and 2013 covers of Sports Illustrated, shares her top tips for getting a "model" complexion.

What is your beauty regimen?
I prefer a natural look day-to-day. I'm a Florida girl and love looking like I've been in the sun. On a daily basis, I use Bobbi Brown Bronzing Powder, the Pot Rouge for Lips & Cheeks in pale pink and the Smokey Eye Mascara. I spend a lot of time on planes, so I have a few essentials with me at all times, including mascara and concealer — they fix me when I'm feeling and looking tired from too much traveling.

When it comes to my hair, I like Oribe Conditioner for Moisture & Control — it smells amazing. I also use Leonor Greyl hair masks.

What are the skin care products you swear by?
I always wash my face, tone, then apply a moisturizer. I use Dr. Hauschka Cleansing Cream to wash my face. It's got a bit of a rough texture to it, so it gently exfoliates while it cleanses. I love it because I'm left with supersoft skin. Bobbi's Hydrating Gel Cream is my go-to because it's superlight and doesn't cause my skin to break out. I always follow with sunscreen.

For some extra care if I'm in New York, I'll go to Christine Chin Spa for a facial. I love her microdermabrasion treatment.

What about your body? Do you moisturize, scrub and work out?
I work out three times a week, usually with David Kirsch at the Madison Square Club. He's such a positive person, and he makes me feel great, although I'm not a super on-time person, and he always says, "Get here 15 minutes early!" But I walk out of his gym feeling amazing, even though I'm a sweaty mess.

In terms of product, for body, I moisturize with Bliss Lemon + Sage Body Butter. I also love to get facials — it's one of my favorite things to do. I have really sensitive skin, and whenever I'm on a modeling job, it gets very irritated because they use a lot of different products.

What is the best beauty advice you've gotten?
Growing up in Florida, my mom made a point to put sunscreen on us, so I picked up that routine early on — it's essential. I like using Bobbi's CC Cream because it's a one-stop shop: it moisturizes, leaves behind a nice tint, while protecting your skin with SPF 35. My mom also taught me to wash and tone my face every night. No matter what time I get home, I go straight to the sink to wash and tone. I'm like a robot.

Also, Bobbi showed me that a little pink blush can go a long way.

Diet

Do you have any secrets in your diet that help to give you such a beautiful complexion?
I try to eat clean and healthy. I'm lucky because I actually like the food I eat. I love fish or chicken, grilled vegetables, sauteed spinach with feta cheese and a good green juice.

Happy detoxing

Diet. A tasty cleanse might sound like an impossible dream, but that's the motto of Honestly Healthy.

Natasha Corrett wants to reassure you that detoxing doesn't mean you have to do a liquid-only cleanse. "I don't like to use juicing fasts," says the founder of the alkaline diet resource Honestly Healthy Food.

It's a sentiment shared by nutritionist Dr. Larry Dibo-Cohen. "Cleansing diets are usually badly unbalanced and don't contain enough protein," he says.

Honestly Healthy is a resource for living an alkaline life — that is, keeping the body's pH levels from fluctuating. The pH in our body can vary considerably from one area to another, with the highest acidity in the stomach (1.35 to 3.5 pH) and lowest in the pancreas (8.8 pH). Modern diets, especially processed foods, are much more acidic than what we ate before the Industrial Revolution. A study published in the Journal of Environmental and Public Health in 2012 established that alkaline diets had a number of health benefits, such as improving cardiovascular, bone and brain health, as well as preserving muscle mass and staving off high blood pressure and stroke.

pH balance

- Alkaline foods: Most fruits and vegetables such as leafy greens, lemon, avocado, berries and grapefruit.
- Acidic foods: Most animal-based food (fish and meat, dairy, cereals) and processed products.

Corrett's diet, outlined in her book "Honestly Healthy Cleanse," focuses on "a more gentle cleanse with delicious food, which is more likely to fit into your life." We asked the gourmet vegetarian to share one of her recipes.

Cucumber and tempeh salad / PROVIDED

ELODIE NOËL
MWN

"If you can get your hands on some mizuna leaves, you can use these in place of the arugula for a super-summery taste. As tempeh is a great source of protein, you can add a handful to any salad you like for a fantastic post-workout protein kick."

Recipe. Cucumber and tempeh salad

Ingredients

For the salad:

- 2/3 cup cashews
- 1.5 cups cucumber, cut into small cubes
- 1 large handful sprouts
- 2 large handfuls arugula
- ¼ red onion, finely sliced
- 2 spring onions, sliced
- 2 tbsp. chopped coriander
- 1.5 cups tempeh, cubed
- 1 tsp. sunflower oil

For the dressing:

- 2 tbsp. rice vinegar
- 1 tsp. agave syrup
- 1 tsp. toasted sesame oil
- 1 tsp. tamari
- 1 clove garlic, finely chopped
- ¼ large red chilli, finely chopped
- Juice of one lime and finely grated zest of half
- Pinch of pink salt

1 Start with the dressing. Place all the ingredients except lime juice and zest in a saucepan and heat gently for 3-4 minutes. Remove from the heat and set aside.

2 Toast the cashews, then transfer them to a bowl along with the cucumber, sprouts, arugula, onion, spring onions and coriander.

3 Return frying pan to the heat and cook the tempeh cubes in the sunflower oil until golden brown on all sides.

4 Add the tempeh to the bowl, then add the lime juice and zest to the dressing in the saucepan.

5 Toss the salad together, transfer to a platter and then drizzle with the dressing.

Letters to the editor

Race issues cloud stories

Re: Binding wounds doesn't mean burying reality (Metro, March 17) Yesterday's Metro included two letters, both negatively addressing a previous letter by Sal Giarranti who supports the police. One letter personally blames Giarranti for not doing anything (I'm pretty sure letter-writer Thomas Wilson has no clue what Sal's feelings are towards bad cops.)

A few racist emails is the most evidence they got. The statistics used compare black motorists to white motorists. That is not an accurate study. Previous studies have shown that blacks die in car accidents, speed, break motor vehicle laws at a higher rate than whites. A simple black driver/white driver is not going to produce accurate statistics. The real problem is being overlooked due to race being injected into this story. Why was the City of Ferguson ordering its PD to write so many tickets? People have resigned and the media will be happy with those stories for a while but Ferguson was only investigated because of the Mike Brown "hands up" lie. How many police departments across the country are writing tickets in order to bolster the budgets of the cities they are supposed to protect? We won't know because when race becomes part of the story, everything else gets overlooked.

Temple must shrug NCAA snub, focus on Bucknell

NCAA. Temple, a No. 1 seed in the NIT, still has an opportunity to win a championship.

Quenton DeCosey will make his postseason debut. / GETTY IMAGES

Temple really got hosed Sunday.

With more impressive quality wins than UCLA, more total wins than Texas and an overall better NCAA Tournament resume than nearly a half-dozen teams, the Owls were victims of a numbers game, and perhaps bias, when the selection was through.

"Honestly, it is never going to settle in," senior guard Will Cummings told reporters after a difficult weekend. "I will always have that chip on my shoulder, that anger, just knowing that we didn't get in with all the hard work we put in, and then try to build our resume."

But there is a silver lining. Though not the glamorous and high-profile event that the NCAA Tournament is, Temple owns a No. 1 seed in the NIT tournament, a competition that features high-profile teams like UConn, Pittsburgh, Miami and Stanford. The NIT can be a rebuilding block for many teams, and after a 9-22 season in 2013-14, Temple has improved leaps and bounds to 23-10. Perhaps a strong performance, or even a title in the NIT, can help springboard the team to national competitiveness next year. It did for SMU, which went deep in last year's National Invitational Tournament and this year won the AAC's regular season and tournament championships.

Temple is back in practice, a year after being home this time of year. There are still games to be played, and with three possible home games, a lot of work left to do.

"We were of course disappointed we didn't get in the [NCAA] tournament," Quenton DeCosey said to reporters of their preparations. "Coach told us before practice we had to refocus because we have a chance to win the NIT Tournament. Guys came out and practiced hard."

The Owls are making their 18th NIT appearance and first since 2006 and the first ever for this year's AAC Coach of the Year Fran Dunphy.

It's gameday

The Owls face Bucknell to open the NIT Tournament, at 7 p.m. Wednesday.

- Bucknell won this year's Patriot League regular season, have a 19-14 record and hold the No. 8 seed.
- With a win, Temple faces the winner of George Washington and Pittsburgh.

1 NFL player quits because of head trauma concerns

At just 24 years old, Chris Borland is done playing football.

The 49ers linebacker told ESPN that he is retiring because of concerns about head trauma.

"I just honestly want to do what's best for my health," Borland told the network. "From what I've researched and what I've experienced, I don't think it's worth the risk."

Borland was set to make $540,000 in salary next season.

"Wow. I loved Chris Borland's game but I can't fault him for calling it quits," St. Louis Rams defensive end Chris Long tweeted. "His concerns are real. Still, it takes a man to do the logical. I don't feel bad for Borland. I feel happy for him. He's made a tough choice."

Borland had the third most tackles of any rookie player in 2014 with an even 100.

2 Donahue excited to be back at UPenn

A new era of Quakers basketball began earlier this week when former Penn assistant coach Steve Donahue was named the team's next head coach, taking over for the retired Jerome Allen.

"I am thrilled to be coming back to Penn as its head men's basketball coach," Donahue said in a statement released by the school Monday night. "Having been a part of Philadelphia and Penn basketball for the greater part of my life, I have a great passion for this city and this program."

Donahue took Cornell to three NCAA Tournaments and a Sweet 16 in 2010.

3 The case for the Wildcats

While filling out your brackets over the next few days, you might be tempted to go with a home pick, Villanova.

But the Wildcats are a very good team, 13-1 against the RPI top 50, a record not even Kentucky or Duke can boast. The team is confident heading into their game against Lafayette.

"A lot of things have been said about us," Darrun Hilliard said. "We're going to keep all that away and just go out and play hard every night." EVAN MACY

4 Special teams savings

The Eagles had one of their best special teams units in history, and perhaps the most game-changing in the entire NFL. So it's no surprise they are doing whatever they can to keep the gang together.

The Eagles restructured linebacker Bryan Braman's deal Tuesday, to save them just about half a million dollars.

The veteran agreed to reduce his salary from$1.2 million to $745,000 in 2015. He also extended his contract with the Eagles.

More roster moves are surely in store, and according to the website overthecap.com, the move gives Philly just about $8 million in cap space moving forward.

5 Buchanan strong as Phillies fall

In a spot start for Jerome Williams, who was scratched prior to the Phillies 5-3 loss Tuesday to the Rays, David Buchanan took the mound and retired 10 straight batters before relenting two hits and one run.

His four valuable innings made him look like a likely candidate to join the Phillies starting rotation, especially with Cliff Lee out for at least two months.

Sixers veteran guard Richardson refuses to back down, retire

NBA. The 76ers have a single source of veteran leadership, stemming from the well-traveled and relentless Jason Richardson.

Most players would have given up and likely retired.

Not Jason Richardson. No way. No chance.

The 34-year-old veteran guard refused to stop working. He wanted to go out on his terms, in his own way.

If his body officially wilted, then he might have considered the idea of hanging up the uniform. Richardson knew there was more left.

He was correct.

Going through an astonishing 763 days between NBA games because of injuries to his left knee and right foot, Richardson finally came back on Feb. 20 against the Indiana Pacers, scoring seven points in 18 minutes. He has since posted double figures in scoring four times, including a 29-point outburst March 4 at Oklahoma City.

The Sixers (15-52) are going nowhere but the lottery once again.

So a natural question arises as to Richardson's pursuit of playing time.

Why?

"I love the game," Richardson said. "I just love the game. I respect the game. I feel like I can still play. As long as I feel good, I'm going to play. The game has given me so much. I really didn't play for two years. My body feels good. My legs are good. I feel like I'm getting my rhythm back in my shot. I'm going to keep going. When I'm on the court, it's such a great feeling."

Richardson acknowledged that he's not the same player as he once was when he won consecutive slam dunk titles during All-Star Weekend.

He believes that there's plenty of basketball remaining to help the Sixers.

"Oh yeah, absolutely," Richardson said. "I can shoot the ball. I've always been able to shoot the ball. I've worked at it my whole career. When I was rehabbing from injuries, I would start shooting when the doctors gave me the green light. I never stopped working on the court and training and rehabbing off the court. I wouldn't stop. I just kept going and going. I didn't just want to get back. I had to get back. I had to prove it to myself."

Sports

"Through it all, my love for the game became even stronger. That tells me I'm not ready to stop. I have miles to go."

Jason Richardson

Sixers coach Brett Brown remembered the wonderful feeling of telling Richardson he was going to start against the Pacers last month.

"He's a fantastic story and even a fantastic example for myself at 54 years old," Brown said. "For our young guys to see the work he put in — he just wouldn't go away. How many people would have given him the chance to play NBA basketball again? And for me to bring him in my office and say, 'Jason, we're going to play you, and I want to start you.' To look at him, you just get goose bumps."

While the Sixers have 15 games left this season, Richardson has 15 more chances to play the game he loves.

"I give it everything I've got," Richardson said. "I'll do that until I can't do it anymore. I hope that's down the road because of my passion for this game."

76ers host Pistons tonight

The Sixers (15-52) have certainly been no pushover of late, but wins are still hard to come by for the youthful, rebuilding team.

They have officially been eliminated from the playoffs (no surprise) after a convincing setback in Boston this past weekend, but they should be back in their element at the Wells Fargo Center against the lowly Pistons (23-43) at 7 p.m. on CSN.

Ten of Philly's 15 wins have come at home where they have a 10-24 record. METRO

NBA power rankings | by James Toscano

No. 1

Warriors (53-13)

This team is cruising for the most part. You just have to hope those back-to-back games against the Knicks and Lakers didn't put them to sleep for Wednesday's game against the Hawks.

No. 2

Hawks (53-14)

Can the Hawks hang on for their last two games of a six-game road trip against the Warriors and Thunder? Will be tough.

No. 3

Rockets (44-22)

Dwight Howard practiced with the Rockets on Monday for the first time since he suffered a right knee injury on Jan 23.

No. 4

Cavaliers (43-26)

Close to a perfect four-game road trip, but Miami got the best of them last week.

No. 5

Grizzlies (47-20)

The big games for Memphis are at the end of the week in Dallas on Friday and at home against Portland on Saturday.

No. 6

Blazers (44-21)

Arron Afflalo is averaging 13.4 points in 30.3 minutes per game since Wes Matthews went down. He scored 8.7 ppg prior.

No. 7

Mavericks (43-25)

After being blown out at home by the Cavaliers, the Mavericks blew out the Clippers last week.

No. 8

Clippers (42-25)

Blake Griffin is back for the Clippers, and Rockets guard Corey Brewer welcomed him with a dunk in his face.

No. 9

Thunder (37-30)

Tough news for the Thunder that Serge Ibaka will have knee surgery. Russell Westbrook can only do so much here.

No. 10

Spurs (41-24)

They're 7-1 over their last eight games, and would be 8-0 if not for letting the Cavs steal a game.

No. 11

Raptors (35-19)

Just 3-10 over their last 13 games, the Raptors got a big triple-double performance out of Kyle Lowry Monday vs. the Pacers.

No. 12

Wizards (39-28)

Five wins in their last six games including wins vs. the Grizzlies and Blazers. Now they have a grueling four-game West Coast trip.

No. 13

Pelicans (36-30)

The Pelicans are making a run down the stretch, but they can't beat the Warriors in a 1 vs. 8 matchup.

No. 14

Bulls (40-28)

The Bulls have dropped five of their last six games — and the one win came against the Sixers. They are missing their stars.

No. 15

Pacers (34-19)

The Pacers are one of the hotter teams in the NBA lately, but they've dropped their last two games .
